

I know that the video I turned in was probably not the best thing that you as a teacher have, or ever will see. That being said, I chose to do the video because of the topic, net neutrality. I actually had a bunch of different videos filmed before I got to this piece and was happy with it. It was almost like my rough drafts, and then I would go re watch and edit the video. Besides from going over that discussion that we had in class, I went and did some more research on the topic of net neutrality. I just wanted to make sure that I understood all of what it embodied. And for my presentation, I'll be including more information that I found whilst doing research.

I think in the video that I made my point clear, that I think bringing down net neutrality would be a bad thing. I believe that it is a way for the big companies to make more money, and a way that would be able to put an end to people's thoughts on the internet. Say that Comcast, and Verizon get there way, as one of the students in class said, that they could very easily put an end to any of that. It could easily end internet creativity, and not only because of the fact that they may be able to block things from coming in, but because they would be in control of the speed of the internet and the price of the speeds, meaning that many people might not be able to afford it.
